

Jeffrey Doonan has been an English teacher and a teacher of the Social Sciences for 20 years. He is currently taking a break from classroom teaching and has begun to focus his attention on editing and photography. He has lived and taught in various countries, spending many years in Istanbul, Turkey and Cyprus. When not involved in his professional interests he likes to travel and experience 'regional cuisines'. A firm believer in lifelong education, he has recently returned to the classroom as a student to pursue an MA in International Relations.